Perhaps it can hardly be said to be seen one of its attributes. It has a more scope, its object is one of a more exalted character.

Education according to the most approved authorities constitutes the basing up of a person and training him for the toils and varied circumcumstances that he must experience while in the great theatre of life. Hence since youth is the proper season for such training, education can only be applied to youth and thus we clearly see that whenever a person is being trained, educated he is in the act of preparing himself for the vicis-itudes of life, so that whatever will facilitate his success and happiness in after life should be the object of edcution. As a twig is to be fostered and nourished with a careful hand, so is he defended from the storms of winter.
