At the beginning of the next, I hate to take any of the papers belonging to the Society.

The Treasurer shall be chosen by ballot every year.

He shall collect all fines imposed by the President, receive entrance money, fix fees, and shall give a fair statement of his account before he leaves his office.

The Society shall meet on Thursday Evening in each week, and on reading the Act, shall read over the proceedings of the preceding session; and the names of those present be called. To see if each has paid, &c.

If any member has any motion or proposal to make, it shall be made before the regular business commences.

The members being divided into three Clauses, shall read, speak, and compose alternately.

Debating on a question, shall be regularly performed at each meeting, the debate shall be opened by two persons appointed for that purpose, under the penalty of a fine; and after they have done, all the attendants have a right to join in the debate.
