these circumstances occurred the difficulties that are the subject of Mr. Kerrispe's memoir. The young man conducted himself badly, beyond doubt, though it was thought by some members of the Faculty that Mr. Kerrispe himself had acted indiscreetly and guided him on to the improprieties into which he was betrayed. As is stated in Governor's communication to the Executive committee read last evening to the Faculty—William Whitaker was by Mr. Kerrispe to attend after evening prayers when, as the whole body of the Faculty is seldom present, it is not in order to do more than refer to his misconduct. It is not according to the regular course of business to offer a motion to dismiss or suspend. A motion to dismiss was nevertheless made and lost by the casting vote of the President. Dr. Phillips was then sent to have an interview with Mr. Whitaker and his wife was of such a character as to induce the Faculty to suspend for the time being, all further proceedings against the young man. Mr. Whitaker desired a postponement of the whole business, till she should be able to communicate with her husband and receive his reply. He supposed that the Whitaker case would give us no further trouble. It was called up at length to be finally disposed of, and with the hope and belief entertained by some of our member the presence and influence of the mother would prevent future disorder on the part of the son, the motion to dismiss was lost. These hopes and expec-
