Faculty who have visited or been educated in other colleges, there is not a single Institution in the land, superior now where students are subjected to the_instances, laborsome and alarming to such a degree.

Mr. H. B. Stanley, late of the Boston college and the University of Va., told me that he was shocked the first time he attended our recitations.

Mr. Daniel Harvey, late of Rambolph Macon, made a similar indication to me, as late as yesterday. I give the names of these two gentlemen, because they rank high both as scholars and well-behaved young men.

Prof. Hubbell, a graduate and now member of the faculty of Williams College, has often told me so.

Prof. Hendrick, for a long time at Cambridge, has made the same statement to me.

"Not a day, not a recitation hour passes, but an uneasy, a cloud of ironic laughter shadows and賺ed to our most distant groves..."

For a long time, I went to hear my class in the old chapel which contains four recitation rooms.

I often that I have frequently heard very great noises in all three rooms except one.

I now hear my class in the Scott Building.

I often that I frequently hear loud murmurs given first from the very recitation rooms in that building.
