for the influences of Christianity. My opponent should have shown his proofs for such startling assertions: as it is, I am at a loss to the facts in toto, and a leave of gentlemen in answer between us.

myself up exceptable is his view of the primer. The argument, their great antiquity and early civilization, was used by Voltaire against the Christian religion, and has been fully answered by Butler. But I think the late will hardly expect me to take charge of the long-tailed, puppy-eating, mean- poisoning people and defend them as being born of thought.

Unfortunally for himself has the gentleman alluded to the battle of Jena.
Suppose the result had been different would it not have been equally the result of action. But the genius of Charles Marie and the superior skill of his troops, enabled him to win the victory over the more active, but less intelligent hosts that opposed them.

But to Germany he goes for his stronghold. Here it is. The Germans are thrift.

© Copyright 2005 by the University Library, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, all rights reserved.
Documenting the American South (http://docsouth.unc.edu/index.html)