windows, wholly at variance with the other other features of this front, which I wish to preserve in a grave, or august character. even at the hazard of a contrast with the sides of the building. — The trees will shut out the two contrasting faces, in a great degree. And if they should not, it will be better (in my mind) that this building have one redeeming, characteristic feature — one good eye. Let us look sometimes with the heart as well as the head, and more rapidly for beauties and less for defects.

The bell may be placed upon any of the buildings with or without a cover to it, and be made as little conspicuous as possible, until a more suitable place be erected for it, even a tower.
