the term of one month.

Provided no student shall be compelled to serve in the year except in consequence of a deficiency in the number of his class, and that the year in this respect be considered as commencing with the second Sunday of each year every year.

And be it further provided that it shall be the duty of each monitor to be especially known in their presence to endeavor to preserve a decent and orderly demeanor among the students generally, and especially among those of his own class as well in the college and during recess as elsewhere, and to the end they will hold it particularly incumbent on them to forbid all immoral and unseemly conduct and conversation all breaches of the laws of the institution and to report the same. And they will likewise consider it their duty to forbid every other irregularity or omission whatever, and to report the same if committed.

And be it further provided, that should it at any time unfortunately happen, that any one or more of the students are guilty command of a monitor in the exercise of his duty to desert from any unprofitable act or misdemeanor whatever, and instead of an duty thus neglected or otherwise misbehaving towards such monitor the student or students do offer any, expressing himself or themselves, their unworthy and unworthy on