Mr. Williams has also been before the Faculty.

Sept. 8.    H6

n 20.  52.

When the stranger, the uninitiated one, enquired and wondered at such a strange and unaccountable leniency, he is politely told by the older members of the Faculty.

"I'm sure understand it; that is the way we always do it. She's just a young man, and all the others are gradually improving.

And here, gentlemen, it is with anguish that I see myself acquainted with a man whom I have always respected and cherished. A man who not without my forty months of deference and affection, did not hesitate to brand me with the name of "infamous liar!" I had to come to Chapel Hill to hear for the first time such horrid epithets. But my conscience whispers to me that I am innocent; and nothing will make me blindest from what I deem my duty!

Dr. Mitchell, Mr. Hubbard and myself had long been in the habit to walk home together on our way from the Chapel, where such offenses are generally tried. I frequently complained to the Doctor, and in very strong language, of the last manner in which the discipline is enforced here. Now, I state that no
