When the inhabitants of a country have become so corrupt in morals, that the solemn promises and pledges of faith of men, are broken. When political truth is extinguished and the solemn engagements of men are merely made as stepping stones to power and as instruments of ele-bioncering, that country not stand long, but is de-tined soon to perish, either by being conquered by a for-dign Country, or destroyed by Civil Consequences, Already are the sections of the Union arrayed against each other, and 1860 will soon decide her short-lived existence.
